Endometrial Ablation: Home instructions

Recovery is different for every woman. Expect to return to normal activity after 24 hours and to have some lingering effects for 2 to 3 weeks after your procedure. Be sure to follow your own care team’s specific instructions if different from what you see here.

Self care during the first 24 hours
During the first 24 hours:

- Don’t drive or use machinery. Have someone drive you home after the procedure.
- Have someone stay with you. If you have any problems or side effects from the anesthesia, you may need help. (Nausea, dizziness, and sleepiness are common in the first hours after ablation.)
- Don’t drink alcohol—or at any time while taking narcotic medicine.
- Expect frequent urination.

Expect vaginal discharge
After ablation, it’s normal to have vaginal discharge for 2 to 3 weeks. At first, the discharge starts out as a watery pink fluid (perhaps with some small pieces of endometrial tissue) and may be heavy during the first 3 days after your procedure. Gradually, it changes to a brownish color and becomes lighter. Here’s what to do:

- Use pads to absorb discharge. Change them every time you go to the bathroom.
- Don’t use a douche or tampons.

What do I need to do next?

1. Have someone stay with you for the first 24 hours after the ablation.
2. Manage your pain.
3. Increase your physical activity slowly.

Manage pain
For the first few days after your procedure, you may have pain in your lower abdomen (belly), which may feel like menstrual cramps. To help ease the pain:

- Place a hot water bottle or heat pad on your abdomen for a half hour at a time. Don’t sleep with a heating pad on, however.
- Take any pain medicine as your doctor directs. Most of the time, an over-the-counter pain medicine such as ibuprofen (Motrin, Advil) is all you need.

Increase physical activity slowly
You can go back to work and exercise as soon as you feel able to. Many women can work the day after their ablation procedure.

Bathe carefully
You can shower as soon as you like, but don’t soak in a bath, hot tub, or swimming pool. Wait until your vaginal discharge has completely stopped—usually about 2 to 3 weeks after your procedure.

When can I have sex?
Don’t have sex until your doctor says it’s okay. Tell your partner that it’s important to check with the doctor before having sex to protect your healing.
When should I call my doctor?

Call your doctor if you notice any of the following after your ablation procedure:

- Severe nausea and vomiting
- Severe abdominal distension (your belly is very bloated or swollen)
- Vaginal discharge isn’t easing after the first week or doesn’t go away completely after 3 weeks
- An increase in your pain, or if your pain medicine isn’t working
- Fever of 100.4°F (38.0°C) or greater
- Your periods aren’t lighter after 3 menstrual cycles

---

Questions for my doctor

---

Intermountain Healthcare complies with applicable federal civil rights laws and does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national origin, age, disability, or sex. Se proveen servicios de interpretación gratis. Hable con un empleado para solicitarlo. 我们将根据您的需求提供免费的口译服务。请找寻工作人员协助。

© 2010-2018 Intermountain Healthcare. All rights reserved. The content presented here is for your information only. It is not a substitute for professional medical advice, and it should not be used to diagnose or treat a health problem or disease. Please consult your healthcare provider if you have any questions or concerns. More health information is available at intermountainhealthcare.org. Patient and Provider Publications F5595 - 08/18 (Last reviewed - 07/18) Also available in Spanish.